ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

For this sixth edition of the California sea lion studbook, I would like to thank the Marine Mammal TAG and Mystic Aquarium for allowing me the opportunity to serve in this role. I'd like to mention a few individuals that have helped make this publication possible:

Michelle Hanenburg, Alaska Sea Life Center, for her help gathering updates.
Heather Crane, for her addition of the natural history to be used in the studbook publication.

NATURAL HISTORY

The California sea lion (Zalophus californianus) is a highly gregarious species of eared seal of the Order Carnivora. The species is highly thigmotactic, lying in densely populated groups and can sometimes be observed piled on top of one another (Peterson & Bartholomew 1967). The lifespan of wild California sea lions is estimated at 15-24 years. Male pinnipeds of most species tend to have life spans shorter than those of females by several years, perhaps because males – especially territorial males or high-ranking bulls – generally live “hard and fast” in comparison with females (Riedman 1990). Both males and females are sexually mature around age four to five years old (Mate 1978).

Breeding occurs in late spring to early summer with pupping season occurring mid-May through late June (Peterson & Bartholomew 1967; Odell 1972, 1975) on islands and remote mainland beaches of the Gulf of California, as far south as Baja California (Riedman 1990). Copulation usually occurs terrestrially, but aquatic copulations do also occur. Females are monestrous, with estrus occurring approximately two weeks post-partum (Peterson & Bartholomew 1967). Non-breeding aggregations range as far north as British Columbia (Peterson & Bartholomew 1967). California sea lions make a range of vocalizations both on land and underwater. Underwater vocalizations appear to be related to breeding activities and social interactions (Schusterman 1968). Male vocalizations are typical and serve a social function to threaten other males as well as advertise dominance (Riedman 1990). Shusterman (1978) suggests that barking among males may also serve to attract mates.

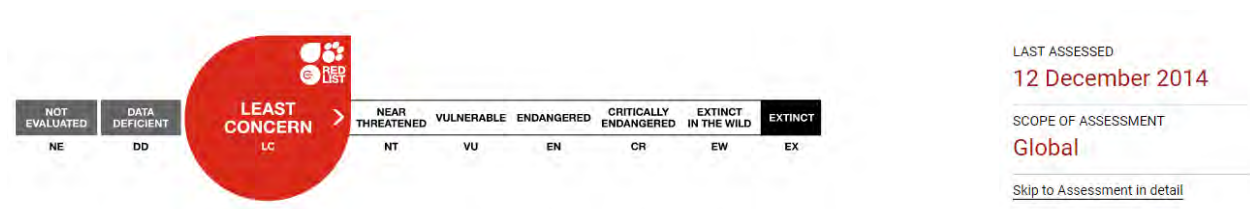

Pups have a dark brown coat which becomes a lighter brown color and is replaced with the adult pelage around four to five months of age. Adult males have a dark brown pelage with lighter colors found on the top of the head and sides of the body. The female pelage ranges from a tan to dark brown color. Molting is the process of shedding an outer layer (e.g. fur or skin), which is replaced by new growth (Riedman 1990). Sea lions experience a gradual molt. There is a distinct sexual dimorphism exhibited with males ranging from 275kg to 390kg. Females, which are smaller, range from 91kg-110kg.

The natural diet primarily consists of squid (Loligo opalescens), northern anchovy (Engraulis mordax), Pacific whiting (Merluccius pro-ductus), rockfish (Sebastes spp.), jack mackerel (Trachurus symmetricus), Pacific mackerel (Scomber japonicus), and blacksmith (Chromis punctipinnis) (Lowry et al., 1986; Lowry and Carretta, 1999). Sea lions in California may follow dolphins to take advantage of their better food-finding abilities (Bearzi 2006) while others participate in depredation of sport fish caught by anglers aboard commercial passenger fishing vessels (Hanan et al. 1989).

Close interactions with fisheries causes entanglement in gear leading often to death and occurs most often in set-and-drift gillnet fisheries (Carretta et al. 2007). Entanglement with marine debris is found in all populations of California sea lion, as well as Galapagos sea lions. Materials like packing bands and discarded fishing line or nets entangle the animals, becoming wrapped around the neck or flippers. These types of entanglements can lead to injury, infection, and even reduced feeding efficiency, or death (Heath & Perrin 2009).

The US population of California sea lions was last assessed December 12, 2014. The IUCN currently lists California sea lions as “Least Concern” with increasing populations and 180,000 mature individuals making up the global population (Aurioles-Gamboa & Hernández-Camacho 2015).

SCOPE OF DATA

Fifth Edition Studbook for: California sea lion, Zalophus californianus Published November 7, 2019.

Due to the size of this population, and time for data research and entry, this studbook contains the living population and their ancestors' back to the wild. Although some of the historical animals have been added, there are still so many more to add. Each subsequent edition will have more historical data.

DATA FIELD DESCRIPTIONS

Studbook ID	Studbook number is unique to each individual in the studbook and is permanent
Location	The location where the event took place
Local ID	Number assigned to the animal by the institution in which the event took place UNK- means the local ID has not been reported to the studbook keeper NONE/_____ - means the institution has not reported or does not use numerical assignments for identifying animals
Sex Type	Male or Female
Birth Date	Date (month/day/year) of the animal's birth. There is a birth date for each individual and check the "Birth Date Est" to judge accuracy of the date
Birth Date Estimate	Indicates whether the birth date is an estimate. None = no estimate Day = the day is estimated Month = the month is estimated. Year = the birth date is within the year of the birth date field
Sire/Dam	Numbers indicate the Studbook ID of the parents of the zoo born animals. WILD = indicates that the animal was wild caught and its parents are unknown individuals UND = indicates that the animal was zoo-born but identification of the parents is not known MULT = indicates that there are several possible parents in zoos, but the specific one could not be determined
Event Type	The movements of the individual animals from the first location to the current or last known location. This includes birth, death, wild capture, transfer, or LTF (lost to follow up)
Date	Documents the date the event occurred. Check the next column ("Date Est.") to determine the accuracy of this date
